

On behalf of Vermont Law School's Center for Agriculture and Food Systems (CAFS) and the Conservation Law Foundation (CLF), I'm excited to announce the launch of the new Vermont Legal Food Hub. Based at CAFS in South Royalton, Vermont, the Hub will match income-eligible farms, food entrepreneurs, and related organizations with skilled attorneys willing to provide free legal services.

The legal fees associated with starting a business, acquiring or transferring land, entering into contracts, navigating permits, and other important matters can be a major obstacle for small farmers and food businesses. Our goal is help them find the legal help they need to be resilient and grow. We're currently recruiting attorneys to join our network and accepting applications for legal aid.

Visit legalfoodhub.org for details.

If you think anyone in your network could benefit from this resource, please help us share it! Feel free to amplify our recent Instagram, Twitter, or Facebook posts, or use any of the template images and captions we've compiled this Dropbox folder.

To get in touch with the hub team, call 802-831-1307 or email LegalHub@vermontlaw.edu.
